Ah! little thought we then, my dear, That fate would part us twain, Who loved each other with a love That bordered nigh to pain. If ever we should chance to meet On Lifes sin-troubled sea, Would you, my queen, forget the past, And tryst again with me t Or would you turn aside your head, And pass me coldly by Without a word, a smile, or look Of pardon in your eye 1 No, no, my sweetheart, when we meet (And meet we shall some day, ) T will be with eager, outstretched hands, Just in the olden way. MARY GLEN. The laverock pipes fu sweetly To the day when newly born, And blithely...
