Excerpt: .Code of Medical Ethics in anywise inconsistent with the broadest dictates of humanity, and that the article of the code which relates to consultations cannot be correctly interpreted as interdicting, under any circumstances, the rendering of professional services whenever there is a pressing or immediate need of them. On the contrary, to meet the emergencies occasioned by disease or accident, and to give a helping hand to the distressed without unnecessary delay, is a duty enjoined on every member of the profession, both by the letter and the spirit of the entire code. With the foregoing resolutions already adopted by the National Association it would seem that the question at issue could be easily and satisfactorily settled. POST GRADUATE INSTRUCTION. No other profession, perhaps, requires the constant study and tireless investigation that medicine demands, and of course no one knows this better than medical...
